

'Let your boat of life be light, packed with only what you need — a homely home and simple pleasures,
one or two friends worth the name,
someone to love and someone to love you,
a cat, a dog and a pipe or two,
enough to eat and enough to wear,
and a little more than enough to drink;
for thirst is a dangerous thing.'

A beginner's guide to wine ...

Albariño [al-bah-ree-nyoh] or Alvarinho [al-vah-ree-nyoh] — a variety of white wine grape grown in Galicia (north-west Spain) and Monção (north-west Portugal) and used to make varietal white wines.

Beaujolais [boh-zhuh-LAY] — a dry, fruity, light-red wine from the Beaujolais region in the south of France.

Bonarda [[baw-NAHRR-dah]] — Bonarda is the name used for four entirely distinct red wine grape varieties; three from northern Italy and one from Argentina.

Carménère [kahr-mhen-NEH-re] — a wine variety used to produce deep red wines and occasionally blended; although also grown in Italy and the US, today the world's largest area planted with this variety is in Chile, South America.

Chablis [sha-BLEE; shah-BLEE] — a dry white wine made from Chardonnay grapes and produced in the northernmost wine district of the Burgundy region in France, it is renowned for the purity of its aroma and taste.

Cuvée [koo-VAY] — a French wine term used by some wineries to indicate a special (or reserve) batch of wine.

Malbec [MALL-beck] — a purple, thin-skinned grape variety used in making rich, dark, juicy red wines with robust tannins.

Monastrell [maw-nehs-TRELL] — Monastrell is Spain's second most planted red grape, which is known as Mourvèdre in France and Mataro in some parts of the New World.

Nebbiolo [neb-YO-lo] — a red Italian wine grape variety that produces lightly-coloured, rich, noble, elegant red wines that require years of ageing to balance the tannins with other characteristics.

Petit Verdot [peh-tee ver-DOH] — a variety of red-wine grape used in classic Bordeaux blends and now attracting attention from wine-makers worldwide including Australia, where it is produced as a varietal wine and also used in blends.

Pinot noir [PEE-noh-NWAH] — a black wine grape; also used to describe wines created predominantly from that grape variety, which is grown mostly in cooler regions and produces wines that are lighter in colour than other red wines, high in acidity and low in tannins, with flavours and aromas that include roses, fruits, black cherry, berry and currant.

Pinot gris [PEE-noh GREE] — a white wine grape variety that normally has a grayish-blue fruit ('gris' means 'grey' in French); the clone of Pinot gris grown in Italy is known as Pinot grigio [PEE-noh GREE-jee-oh].

Pouilly-Fumé [poo-ee few-may] — an AOC for dry white wine from the Loire Valley wine-producing region of France; the wine itself is characterized by smoky flavours and minerality.

Prosecco [praw-SEHK-koh; proh-SEHK-koh] — an Italian wine, generally sparkling, made from a variety of white grape of the same name grown mainly in the Veneto region of Italy.

Reisling [rees-ling] — an aromatic white grape variety displaying flowery, almost perfumed, aromas as well as high acidity; it originated in the Rhine region of Germany and is used to make dry, semi-sweet, sweet and sparkling white wines.

Rosé [ROW-zay] —a wine with some of the colour typical of a red wine but only enough to turn it pink; this pink colour can range from a pale peach to near-purple, depending on the grapes and wine-making technique used.

Sangiovese [san-joh-VAY-zeh; san-jaw-VAY-zeh] — a red Italian wine grape variety that produces a hearty, dry red with flavours of black cherries; outside Italy, it is famous as the predominant grape in Chianti blends.

Sauvignon blanc [so-VEE-non blahnk] — a green-skinned grape variety originating from the Bordeaux region of France and now planted in many of the world's wine regions, it produces a crisp, white and refreshing white varietal wine.

Syrah [see-RAH] or Shiraz [she-RAHZ] in Australia — a dark-skinned grape variety that produces powerful red wines.

Tempranillo [temp-rah-nee-oh] — a variety of black grape originally from Spain that is widely grown to produce medium- to full-bodied, ruby-red wines with lower acidity and flavour characteristics such as plum, cherry and strawberry, mixed with earthy minerality.

Varietal — the term used to describe wines made primarily from a single named grape variety, and which typically displays the name of that variety on the wine label.

Verdelho [vehr-DELL-oh] — a white wine grape variety grown throughout Portugal and used in Australia to make lighter-style white wines that are typically fresh, flavoursome and vibrant, with a balanced palate of fruit and a smooth, buttery finish.

'Would Sir like a glass of Chablis?

Why yes, of course Sir would like a glass of Chablis.'
